

Donna Yanowski

Of all the opportunities I am open to at Blossom Heights, the most joyous is the freedom to share with the children the bits and pieces of memories from my childhood. It seemed my 3 sisters and I lived outside more often than not and toys came at Christmas and birthdays. We improvised, created, performed, read, and "made do" with what was available to us. I caught every animal that was slower than me. These are my gifts.

Our public libraries have been a part of my adult life and I can often be found in the book section, usually the children's area. Riding my bike and taking a book to Hermann Park or the grounds of Rice University is something I am looking forward to when the weather is more inviting!
